

STATE REPRESENTATIVE JOB DESCRIPTION

OVERVIEW

The AAC State Representative is the local presence of the American Adoption Congress. The AAC is an important and valuable brand in adoption reform, and all State Reps should be familiar with the policies and positions of the AAC before assuming this important role. As an individual, you are free to express your personal opinions about adoption; however, your AAC title should only be used when you are communicating the positions and policies of the AAC. These policies and positions can be found on our website, www.americanadoptioncongress.org.

AAC State Reps are incredibly valuable to the organization. They serve as the liaison to the local communities and to individual states in a number of critical areas. Membership, legislation and education are the three primary areas where State Reps can make a big impact within their local and state communities. The job description includes suggestions for ways that you can contribute in your state.

HOW DO I BECOME AN AAC STATE REPRESENTATIVE?

1. Complete the Application, Information and Conflict of Interest forms; and
2. Submit the completed forms to your Regional Director.

These forms are available on the AAC website in the "Join Us" section.

RESPONSIBILITIES

1. Membership – attract new members and retain current members.
 - Contact current members in your state and introduce yourself, especially if you are a new rep. Maintain regular contact and visibility by checking in quarterly via email or a phone call.
 - When you meet anyone touched by adoption (adoptive parents, birth parents, adoptees, other family members, adoption professionals), give them a copy of the Decree and the AAC web site address. Encourage them to consider joining AAC. Keep a database of these people and check in with them periodically.
2. Education
 - Distribute copies of the Decree to local libraries, adoption agencies, adoptive parent groups, etc. Always put your name and email address or phone number of each copy you distribute.
 - Attend conferences or workshops in your state relating to adoption.

- As a triad member, volunteer to speak to prospective adoptive parent groups so they may learn from your experiences as an adoptee, birth parent or adoptive parent.
- Post flyers about AAC on college bulletin boards and libraries in your area.
- Contact your state's adoption unit and identify yourself as a resource to facilitate discussion groups with an adoption theme.
- If you have an adoption story that you are willing to share, submit an article to your community paper, a magazine, or even your in-house employment publication.
- Contact all adoption-related organizations and support groups in your state quarterly to inquire as to how AAC can provide assistance.

3. Legislation

- Become familiar with your state's web site and your state legislators. The address for most state web sites is: www.state.XX.us. "XX" = the 2-letter state abbreviation; i.e., TX=Texas, VA=Virginia.
- Monitor all adoption-related legislation in your state and notify the Legislative Director of all bills that are introduced. Any State Rep not familiar with monitoring legislation should contact AAC's Legislative Director for assistance. A Rep can also enlist the support of other AAC members to assist with legislation. Remember – many states have little to no adoption legislation proposed in a session; others have access to records bills, and still others have bills which could improve or strip away the rights of triad members. It is important that you work with the Legislative Director to keep abreast of adoption-related legislation.

4. Other

- State Reps should provide a yearly written report to their Regional Director, with a copy to the President and the Legislative Director. The report should be submitted 30 days prior to the annual meeting of the Board of Directors. State Reps shall provide additional reports throughout the year if appropriate or upon request.
- When possible, State Reps should assist with and attend their regional conference. State Reps should attend the AAC national conference whenever possible to connect with others and to educate themselves on current adoption issues.
- State Reps shall have email access.

1. Special Projects: If a State Rep is interested in doing a special project (either legislative, educational or outreach), a Special Project proposal form must be submitted to the Regional Director. Special projects must be approved by the Regional Director, the Legislative Director if appropriate, and the Treasurer. If the project is unusually extensive or costly, it will be submitted to the AAC Executive Committee for approval. Examples of special projects include Reg Day, National Adoption Month activities, or co-hosting a local conference.

2. Expenses: Expense reports for reimbursement of expenses shall be submitted to the Regional Director for approval. No expenses will be reimbursed unless submitted on the appropriate expense form with all receipts attached, approved by the Regional Director.
